Rashid's father is a farmer. He has a small farm near Nizwa with date palms, lemon trees and some goats. Every morning he wakes up before the sun and goes to water the trees. Last Friday, Rashid went with him to help. First, they fed the goats and gave them water. Then they picked lemons and put them carefully into baskets. It was hard work, and the sun was very hot. At midday, they sat in the shade of an old palm tree and ate bread, cheese and dates. Rashid's father told him that his own grandfather planted that tree many years ago. In the afternoon, they took the lemons to the souq and sold all of them. Rashid was tired that evening, but he was happy to help his father, and he understood why his father loves the farm so much.
